

PLAY NO TRESSPASSING

BRADLEY HIGH SCHOOL TO ENTERTAIN

Three Act Play to be Presented at Orpheum Next Thursday Evening.

Next Thursday evening, April 12th, the people of Bradley and vicinity will be treated to an evening of rare enjoyment, for on this evening the Bradley High school will present a three act play at the Orpheum Hall, entitled No Trespassing.

Every effort is being made by the teachers and class to make the occasion one long to be remembered by the people of Bradley, and the public are to be assured of seeing a rare first class production. The plot of the play deals of a lively city girl who goes down in the country on a vacation and to get rid of a husband of her fathers choice, whom she had never seen. Here she runs into this very man living there under an assumed name. He meets her by accident and mistakes her for one of a pair of twins, who have been living at the farm house. She discovers his mistake and in the character of both twins, creates much confusion but in the end, falls in love with him.

An evening spent at Orpheum next Thursday will be well spent, and will make you forget the high cost of living and all your other worries.

MRS. HORNBECK DEAD

DIED OF HEART FAILURE MONDAY EVENING

Realized End Was Near—Inquest Held Wednesday—Leaves Three Children

Mrs. Lydia Hornbeck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ohil Corrier of this city died at the home of parents here Monday evening, of pericarditis. The young mother was stricken with an attack of heart disease and passed away while seated in a chair. She has been making her home with her father on Forrest Ave. and took sick last Saturday when she complained of smothering attacks and of her limbs swelling and of heart attacks and could not breathe well at the time.

Mrs. Hornbeck was 27 years of age at the time of her death, and leaves 3 children, father, mother, sisters and brothers to mourn their loss.

INQUEST HELD

Coroner L. E. Fenouille was called and conducted an inquest at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. The story of the young woman's father was taken at the investigation. Speaking of the circumstances surrounding his daughter's death, he said:

"Last night she had a light supper and then went upstairs. At 11 o'clock I heard her complaining and coughing. I went up stairs and found her sitting on the bed trying to catch her breath. I called to my son to come up and help me take her downstairs where it was warmer. We took her down stairs and as we placed her in a chair she said: 'Oh I am dying, I am going! My poor little children.' I called several doctors but could not get none of them until I called Dr. Morel of Bourbonnais. He came at once but she was dead before he arrived."

HEART DISEASE

Dr. Morel testified to having been called at 12:20 o'clock this morning. "I answered the call at once," he said, "but found Mrs. Hornbeck dead when I arrived. I made an external examination and found the limbs badly swollen and body bloated. From all appearances and history of the case, my opinion is that death was due to pericarditis, or heart disease."

The woman was 27 years old and leaves three children all under eight years of age. She has been living with her aged father and mother who are in very poor circumstances. The mother is nearly blind.

The Discovery of Christ

A Christian is one who is loyal to Jesus Christ. A man is not a Christian because he has worked out his idea of the Bible. That is important, but it is fidelity to a book. A man is not a Christian because he accepts certain dogmas and creeds. That is fidelity to philosophy. A man is not a Christian because he yields himself to the directions of the church. That is loyalty to an organization. The real Christian is the man who is under the domination of Christ, who believes in the quality of spiritual life manifested in Jesus and is willing to become a disciple of Christ, to share that life and submit his ideals and motives and purposes to the Christ to be molded and used by Him.

Now the real Christ has too frequently been obscured by art, by theology and most of all by the inconsistent lives of His disciples. It is therefore natural that the hungry heart of the world should cry out: "We would see Christ." The cry "Back to Christ" is not new, but in our day it is becoming louder and more insistent. No less a person than the real Christ would bring permanent satisfaction to the heart of humanity. What is the surest way of getting back to Christ? Shall we visit the land in which he lived? Shall we search the streets of Jerusalem? Shall we stand on Olivet, or Calvary in the hopes of finding him?

John R. Mott, in answer to the question: "How may Jesus Christ be made a reality to me?" put the study of the Gospels first.

"Christ becomes and remains real to one who continues the proper study of the records of the life and works and words of Christ." As an illustration of his meaning he makes reference to General Chinese Garden who "to a remarkable degree preserved a vital faith in Christ and seemed to live in his presence. But he was a constant student of the Scriptures, at some periods of his life, and they were the periods when Christ seemed to dominate him most, he studied the Bible from seven o'clock in the morning until eleven, and often until the noon hour. "It was when Christ walked with the discouraged disciples on the way to Emmaus and opened unto them the Scriptures that their hearts burned within them with divine inspiration. The Bible is not a cemetery of dead names; it is a resurrection garden. It is alive with power. Its pages throbb with divine energy. Its fragrance is the fragrance of the Rose of Sharon. It is a deathless book because it contains the story of the perfect life. If you want to find Jesus read your New Testament and associate with the Master of life whose portrait is there enshrined."

A young Japanese admitted to the study of Dr. Parks of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, and asked abruptly: "Sir, can you help to find the beautiful life?" Dr. Parks answered:

"Do you wish to talk with me about religion?" "No sir, I want merely to find out about the beautiful life."

"Have you read the Bible?" "Yes sir, I have read some, but I don't like the Bible."

"Have you ever been to church?" "Yes, I have been twice, but I don't like the church. I am trying to find the beautiful life. Many of you people do just as our Japanese people do, they are bad, they cheat and they tell lies, yet they are all Christians. That is not what I want!"

"Where did you hear about this beautiful life?" I never heard about it, but I saw a man in a boarding-house in San Francisco, soon after I landed—a poor old man, but he had what all my life I have wanted. I thought it might be in the world, but I never saw it in my own country. I call it the beautiful life. This old man went about helping everybody; he was always happy, he never thought about himself. I knew him three weeks, and watched him all the time and felt that I must have what he had."

Dr. Parks read to him the 13th chapter of First Corinthians, that beautiful "love chapter" beginning: "If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love, I am become a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal," and asked: "Is that it?" The Japanese said "Yes, it sounds like it. But how can I get it?"

Then Dr. Parks told him very simply the story of the perfectly beautiful life and said: "Now you have just to follow that life." As his visitor left, he gave him a copy of the New Testament, "Can you not give me a more modern book. You know Japanese are up-to-date."

"No, it is not in any other book. This is the One Book you need. Study it, and pray that light may be given you to live this beautiful life."

Two years later the young man again visited Dr. Parks hurriedly just before leaving for San Francisco, called to an important position in his native land. His message was already written on his radiant face. "Sir, I have found the beautiful life; I have found Jesus." Then he went back to Japan to tell his own people of that life.

Dear reader, do you want to find the perfectly beautiful life? Read the New Testament; scan those sacred words until the figure of your Lord shall stand out on the page as a living presence wanting to come into your heart.

CAP and BELLS

REGULATION BRAND.

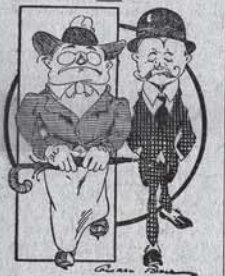

"Well, this dance number strikes me as being—a trifle too daring for the average theater audience."
 "Where have you been for the past few years?"
 "Oh, around and about."
 "I suspect you've been asleep. There are any number of debutantes present who consider this dance too slow for words."

Positively Tame.
 "Now, this dance number strikes me as being—a trifle too daring for the average theater audience."
 "Where have you been for the past few years?"
 "Oh, around and about."
 "I suspect you've been asleep. There are any number of debutantes present who consider this dance too slow for words."

Asked and Answered.
 "What do you work at?" she queried.
 "At dodging what?" the tramp replied.
 "At dodging what?" she asked again.
 "Work," he answered—and died.

Too Much of a Good Thing.
 "Why not hire an efficiency expert to reorganize your office?"
 "I tried that once," replied the business man.
 "Didn't the plan succeed?"
 "Only too well. Everybody quit but the efficiency expert, and I discharged him for fear he might try to reorganize me."

A DIFFERENCE.

Mr. Wilson—Which do you think is the better milk, he or his wife?
Mr. Wilson—Do you mean for quality or quantity?
A Poor Substitute.
 "Do you suppose moving pictures will ever do away entirely with performances on the stage?"
 "No, indeed," replied the astute theatrical manager. "In the opinion of the tired business man, to whom I cater exclusively, no shadow on the scene, however lifelike, can take the place of a real live chorus girl."

The Yield of War.
 For many years the Quaker calendar has been looked for with much pleasure; the quotations and notices have been read and enjoyed. This year's calendar had the following on its front page:
 "War! What is it after all the people get? Why, taxes, widows, wooden legs and debt!"—Philadelphia North American.

Turnips and Men.
 It is a truth beyond our ken
 And yet a truth all men can read;
 It is with turnips as with men—
 If left alone they go to seed.

Very Natural.
 "Did you notice anything particular about it speeder when the motor cop caught him?"
 "Yes, I noticed he had quite a pinched expression."

The Source of Profit.
 "Did you make the money you expected raising chickens?"
 "No. After a little experimenting I decided that the way to make the money is to raise chicken feed."
Insert Letter "E."
 "So you were invited to participate in a profit-sharing scheme?"
 "Yes."
 "How did you come out?"
 "I discovered that the purpose of the scheme was not sharing but sharing."

Won't Burn.
 "Do you ever lose your temper?"
 "Not often," answered the ultimate consumer, "but I would like to lay my hands on the dealer who sold me five tons of indestructible coal!"

Lee's Little JESTS

AN EYE TO BUSINESS.

"I got a pain in my neck from looking up so long yesterday while you were flying about," said the county fair visitor.
 "You did, eh?" replied the professional aviator. "I carry a side line Doctor Jigger's Eureka Liniment, the greatest preparation of its kind. The price is $1 a bottle. Rub a few drops on the back of your neck and the pain will disappear in a jiffy."

LIKE LOTS OF US.

We approached a seedy-looking individual on the street corner.
 "Prosperity," we observed, consolingly, "has rained many a man."
 "Well, I'd just like to see it ruin me," he answered boastfully.
 Perceiving the uselessness of our sympathy, we discreetly withdrew.

Domestic Economy.
 "After all," said the extravagant wife, "it certainly pays to buy the best."
 "Oh, it does, eh?" sneered the long-suffering freight-payer of the combination.
 "Of course it does," she replied. "Just look at this gown that I paid $300 for. I've worn it three times already and it looks as good as new."

Just a Way They Have.
 Oh, woman, woman, you are queer. As poets have oftine sung; Though you can hold a baby dear, You cannot hold your tongue.

Pleasing Him.
 "The Jilwavy next door are playing a grand opera selection on their phonograph."
 "Yes, a Wagnerian piece. The next selection will probably be something by a rattling composer."
 "Are you certain?"
 "Quite. The Jilwavy girls think a lot of their father."

It is Coming to This!

GETTING IN TRIM.

Truth Comes Out.
 Brown—Don't get any or I'll be forced to pound a little sense into your head.
 Green—Hah! It would take a dozen lbs. you to pound any sense into my head.

Not for Her.
 "Do you consider thirteen an unlucky number?" queried the splasher.
 "Not for me," answered the pretty game widow. "Why it was on the thirteenth of the month that I got my divorce."

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

Classy Suit of French Serge.

The prophet who circulated the report that suits would not be in demand this spring is without honor in his own country or anywhere else. Either nobody paid him any attention or else each woman decided to act independently in this matter and to have a new spring suit whether anybody else wore one or not. A whole regiment of prophets might shout in pursuit of French, that suits are not to be worn, without influencing the loyalty of American women to the "tailor-made." Intuition convinces her that it suits her type and it is always the majority of her wardrobe.

One of the new serge models is shown here and its fine lines and "class" flash themselves into the mind at a glance. The jacket is cut to the back and front and smartly finished with fancy buttons. The collar may be buttoned close to the neck, but is shown open, with adjustable over-collar in white. An attractive feature of this coat appears in the pockets which are made with extension laps. The sleeves flare at the cuffs, where one of the novel buttons is posed. It is as important here as the dot over an "i."

The skirt is plain, gathered in full at the back and has a loose belt at the waist. It is a little longer than the skirts of the past two seasons, reaching about two inches below the tops of the shoes.

Easter Hats for Little Girls.

Everyone is entitled to a new hat for Easter, even the littlest maid in the family, and no one will wear her new finery quite so joyously. She has not been neglected by the milliners, who must attend to the more serious business of seeing to it that her elders are properly habited, and it is not difficult to come to a decision in choosing a hat for her. In shapes those that resemble little bonnets have all the preferences. Many of them have round crowns and narrow brims and as many more are bell-shaped, but, for the very little girl, there is no great variety in shapes.

Of the two hats shown in the picture the one at the top is designed for a child of three or more years and the lower hat for the little miss of seven at least. For the younger girl the shape is covered with silk in a light color as a foundation for the rows of fine flingerie lace plaitings that cover it. At each side near the back two flat rosettes, made of the plaited lace, are placed with the edge of one overlapping the other. A collar of grosgrain ribbon is run through the center of the rosettes and finished with bows at the back and front.

This is one of the pretty little hats that the home milliner can make without much risk of failure. The other is a satin-covered shape, trimmed with baby velvet ribbon in two colors. It is not a difficult piece of work, but requires some knowledge of millinery making. Among the hats that are made at home with little trouble are those of heavy linen, decorated with embroidery. Any of the standard pattern concerns furnish patterns for summer wear. They are always good style for the season.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated, waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again. Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Victor Hugo's Grandson.

George Victor Hugo, the grandson of the great Victor Hugo, is now showing in Paris about 100 sketches which are attracting great attention. At the beginning of the war he was a censor, an occupation in which he appreciated too keenly the humor of exercising such a function by the grandson of his grandfather. So, in spite of his white hair, he gave up the censorship and set out for the army. He did not become a general, but he is a lieutenant. After a year and a half at the front he has returned from Champagne with a hundred choice acquisitions, which all Paris is running to see. He has added somewhat to the splendor of the name of Hugo, as he has been twice in the course of the war cited in the orders of the day for meritorious conduct.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF HAIR STOPS FALLING

Girls! Try This! Makes Hair Thick, Glossy, Fluffy, Beautiful—No More Itching Scalp.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how full, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Adv.

He Ran Out of Ink.

A seven-year-old boy grew rather peeved at his eleven-year-old sister. He believed that diplomacy rests largely in note writing, so, instead of delving his opinion by word of mouth, he retired to a safe and private place, where he took his pen in hand and wrote the following:
 "Susie is a hobo."
 "Susie is a bone head."
 "Susie is a skunk."
 "Susie is a wart hog."
 "Susie is a polecat."
 "Susie is a hoo."
 "I could say more, but I will not be too hard on her."

Pickly Fear Makes Fodder.

The utilization of pickly fear in the production of feeding cakes for cattle is reported by the British and South African Export Gazette as engaging the attention of South African agriculturists. For this purpose it is said to have food value of high quality. Its value was demonstrated during a recent drought, when only by its use were the farmers able to keep their cattle, sheep, goats and ostriches alive. The result is that many are now actually planting what they formerly tried to exterminate.

No Hope.
 Pansy—Isn't it tragic that John fell down on his job?
 Lily—Well, he still can make good.
 Pansy—No, he can't; he was a steppelack.—Jester.

POVERTY OF WEALTH. A great abundance of food does not make a great nation. The invincible Roman legions lived for days at a time on what which they gathered and ate as they marched. The richest men of the earth dine as frugally as mortar mixers. Andrew Carnegie could afford to send vessels to every land to gather its delicacies for his table; his favorite dish is oatmeal.

THE MEN WHO CAN AFFORD IDLENESS seldom want it. No Lincoln, Carlyle or Washington ever watched the clock. Edison labors 16 hours a day, not because of the final reward that it will bring, but because of the happiness he finds in it. Michael Angelo when painting his immortal pictures in the Sistine Chapel worked with such enthusiasm that for weeks at a time he never removed his clothing. Walter Scott arose at five in the morning and wrote some of his novels when he was employed as a clerk. Ruskin uttered a great truth when he said: "If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; if pleasure, you must toil for it; toil is the law."

IF YOU HAVE WEALTH YOU CAN PURCHASE one hundred outfits of wearing apparel, but you can only wear one at a time. Socrates never owned but one pair of shoes, but his name is immortal. If you have wealth you can purchase beautiful paintings and adorn your home with statuettes that wouldn't bring you happiness. If you have wealth you can purchase furniture inlaid with gold and upholstered with fine fabrics. That doesn't mean contentment. When Thomas lived by Walden Pond and found a stone one day that he fancied and used it for a chair, but rolled it away later. If you have wealth you can purchase a great park and erect a splendid mansion, but tradition tells us that there was a very happy man who lived in a tub, and when the king came to see him and asked what he could desire from the king, Diogenes replied, "That you would step from between me and the sun." If you have wealth you can possess an organ with golden pipes, but Beethoven composed his immortal symphonies on a cheap harpsichord. If you have wealth you can equip a luxurious studio, but Turner painted in a garret and mixed his colors in a broken tea cup. Money can purchase copies of Sir Joshua Reynolds, but God gives the sunset away free. Money can employ musicians to perform for a private concert, but the song of the lark in the tree and the music of children's laughter is for the millionaire and the poor man alike. Wealth cannot purchase the great things of life. It cannot buy a contented mind and a serene life. It cannot purchase goodness and beauty. - Dale H. Carnegie in Leslies.

Every man has his troubles - and most of them wear skirts. If a man is married he is foolish to talk in his sleep. The homier a man the more his wife trusts him. A secret is something known to but one person. Rights of Automobiles on Highways. The town of Ayer, Mass., has appealed to the supreme court of that state a suit won by a motorist who recovered damages for injuries to his car, caused by sinking into a sandy street. The decision will settle finally whether or not an automobile has the same rights to a highway as a horse-drawn vehicle.

High School To Entertain At Orpheum Theatre Next Thursday Evening

The Bradley High School will give an entertainment at the Orpheum Theatre next Thursday evening, that promises to be a real treat to people who will witness the play.

The program as arranged is as follows:

CHARACTERS

- HERBERT EDMOND RAYNOR—A young Englishman, rich owner of Deepdale Farm.
- CLEVELAND TOWER—Young city fellow, guest of Raynor.
- MR. PALMER—A farmer.
- MR. IRVING—A wealthy man from the city.
- BILL MEADER—"On the town".
- JIM MEADER—Son of Bill.
- LESLIE IRVING—A lively city girl.
- ANNIE PALMER—A country girl who wants to be educated.
- MRS. PALMER—A bustling farmer's wife who takes boarders.

SYNOPSIS

ACT I—The Palmer "settin' room"—Mixed identities.

ACT II—The Palmer "settin' room, the following day—And still mixed.

ACT III—The Palmer "settin' room, four weeks after—"All's well that ends well".

A "lively city girl" goes down into the country on a vacation and to get rid of aproposed husband of her father's choice whom she has never seen, and runs into the very man living there under another name. He meets her by accident and takes her to be one of a pair of twins who have been living at the farm house. She discovers his mistake and in the character of both twins creates much confusion but falls in love with him.

PRUDENCE of the PARSONAGE

Miss Fairy has her first beau. She flouts the twins and they prepare to even the score in a ruthless and unforgettable manner.

Mr. Starr, a widower Methodist minister, comes to Mount Mark, Ia., to take charge of the congregation. Prudence, the eldest, keeps home and mothers Fairy, Carol and Lark, the twins, and Constance, the baby. The boys come stir the curiosity of all Mount Mark, and the Ladies' Aid society loses no time in getting acquainted, asking myriad questions and offering advice that isn't wanted.

"May I speak to Constance Starr, Mr. Starr?" she asked. "It is very important. This is Prudence, her sister." "And when Constance picked up the telephone, she cried: 'Oh, you blessed little child, why didn't you tell me? Will you forgive me, Connie? You're a dear, sweet, good little darling, that's what you are.' 'Oh, Prudence! That was all Connie said, but something in her voice made Prudence hang up the receiver quickly, and cry bitterly! That noon Prudence pronounced judgment on the stanzas, but her eyes twinkled, for Carol and Lark had scolded each other roundly for giving things away! 'Connie should have refused to obey you,' she said gently, holding Connie in her arms. 'She has been punished more than enough. But you twins! In the first place, I right now abolish the Skull and Crossbones forever and ever. And you cannot play in the barn again for a month. And you must go over to the Avery's this afternoon and tell them about it, and pay for the apples. And you must send all of your spending money for the next month to that woman who is gathering up things for the bad little children in the reform school—that will help you remember what happens to boys and girls who get in the habit of taking things on the spur of the moment.' 'The twins accepted all of this graciously, except that which referred to confessing their sin to their neighbors. That did hurt! The twins were so superior, and admirable! They couldn't bear to ruin their reputations. But Prudence stood firm, in spite of their weeping and wailing. And that afternoon two shame-faced sorry girls crept meekly in at the Avery's door to make their peace. 'But about the Skull and Crossbones, it's mostly punishment for me, Prudence said Connie regretfully, 'for the twins have been in it ever since we came to Mount Mark, and I never got in at all! And I wanted them to call me Lady Mamma, Featherfagale.' And Connie sighed.

CHAPTER V. Lessons in Etiquette. Connie was lying flat on her back near the register. The twins were sitting on the floor near her, hearing each other conjugate Latin verbs. And Prudence, with her darning basket, was earnestly trying to get three pairs of wearable stockings out of eleven hairy remnants. So Fairy found them as she came in, radiant and glowing. 'Glorious day,' she said, glancing impartially at her sisters. 'Just glorious.' Connie, you should be out of school this morning. You aren't you grown up enough to sit on chairs, or won't your footies reach the floor—Babbie, Eugene Hebler, you know—is coming to spend the evening, Prudence.' The whole family came to attention at this. 'Oh, goody!' cried Connie. 'Let's make taffy.' 'Yes,' agreed Carol with enthusiasm. Carol was always enthusiastic on the subject of something to eat. 'Yes, and what else shall we have?' 'You will likely have pleasant dreams, Carol,' was the cool retort. 'You twins and Connie will not put in an appearance at all. Fairy will serve the refreshments, and will eat with us. Babbie and I shall spend the evening in the front room.' 'The front room?' echoed Prudence. 'This room is much cheerier, and more homelike.' 'Well, Babbie isn't a member of the family, you know,' said Fairy. 'You are doing your best,' sniffed Carol. 'Now you girls must understand right off that things are different here than what they were at Examinator's. The proper thing is to receive callers privately, without the family en masse sitting by and superintending. That's etiquette, you know. And one must always serve refreshments in a quiet, unobtrusive way. Men are not to care to go places where the cats aren't forthcoming.' 'Men! Are you referring to this Babbling creature now?' interposed Carol. 'Ouch!' said Lark. 'But wasn't it rather—poky—just sitting in the front room by yourselves all evening?' asked Prudence doubtfully, ignoring the offended twins. 'Oh, I dare say it will. But it's the proper thing to do,' said Fairy complacently. 'Wouldn't it be more fun to have the girls in for a little while?' persisted Prudence. 'Oh, it might—but it wouldn't be the proper thing at all. College men do not care to be entertained by babies.' 'No,' snapped Lark, 'the wisdom of babies is too deep for these—these men in embryo.' 'Do you see so exquisitely said that Lark was quite restored to her sensibility. 'In embryo' had been added to her vocabulary that very day in the biology class. And Carol said 'Ouch!' with such whole-souled admiration that Lark's spirit soared among the clouds. 'She had a swell!' 'And what shall we serve them?' urged Prudence. 'I suppose it would hardly do to—pop corn, would it?' 'No, indeed. This is the first time, and we mustn't give extra. Babbie is all the rage at school, and the girls are frantic with jealousy because I have cut everybody else out.' 'Do you like him, Fairy? Don't you think he's tiresome?' He talks so much about the moon, and the stars. 'To be sure I like him. He's great fun. He's always joking and never has a sensible thought, and hates study. The only reason he came here instead of going to a big college in the East is because his father is a trustee.' 'Well, will serve oyster stew then. Now, will you twins run downstairs to the oysters?' asked Prudence briskly. 'Who? Us?' demanded Lark indignantly and ungrammatically. 'Do you think we can carry home oysters for this Babbling young rascal? Not so! Let Fairy go after the oysters!' 'Oh, yes, twinnies, I think you'll go, all right. Run along, and be quick.' 'For a few seconds the twins gazed at each other studiously. Neither spoke. Without a word, they went upstairs to prepare for the oysters. They whispered softly going through the upper hall. 'Twins! You must hurry!' This was Prudence at the bottom of the stairs. And the twins set off quite hurriedly. Their first call was at the meat market. 'A pint of oysters,' said Lark briefly. When he brought them to her, she smelled them suspiciously. Then Carol sniffed. 'Have you got any rotten ones?' she demanded. 'No,' he answered, laughing. 'We don't keep that kind.' 'The twins sighed and hurried next door to the grocery. 'A nickel's worth of pepper—the strongest you have.' This was quickly settled—and the grave-faced twins betook themselves to the corner drug store. 'We've used something with a perfectly awful smell,' Lark explained soberly. 'What kind of a smell?' 'We don't care what kind, but it must be like something rotten or dead, if you have it.' 'What do you want it for?' 'We want to put it in a room to give it a horrible smell for an hour or so.' Lark winked at him sullenly. 'It's a joke,' she further elucidated. 'I see.' His eyes twinkled. 'I think I can fix you up.' A moment later he handed her a small bottle. 'Just sprinkle this over the carpet. It won't do any harm, and it smells like thunder. It costs a quarter.' Carol frowned. 'I suppose we'll have to take it,' she said, 'but it's pretty expensive. I hate to have druggists get such a lot of money.' He laughed aloud. 'I hate to have you get a good licking tomorrow, too—but you'll get it just the same, or I miss my guess.' When the twins arrived home Fairy was just cutting the candy she had made. 'It's delicious,' she said to Prudence. 'Here's a nice dish for you and the girls. Pitch in, twins, and help yourselves. It's very nice.' The twins vowed her haughtily away. 'No, thank you,' they said. 'We couldn't eat that candy with relish. We are unworthy.' Then they went upstairs, but not to their own room at once. Instead they slipped noiselessly into the front bedroom, and a little later Carol came out into the hall and stood listening at the head of the stairs, as though on guard. 'Be sure and leave quite a few stitches in, Lark,' she whispered once. 'We want it to hang together until Babbie gets here.' That was all. Presently Lark emerged, and their own door closed behind them. 'It's a good thing father has to go to the trustees' meeting tonight, isn't it?' asked Carol. And Lark agreed, absently. She was thinking of the oysters. Do you think that Fairy, knowing the twins, will thwart their plan to embarrass her?

(TO BE CONTINUED) High Honor Deserved. The father of the lifeboat in America was James Francis, who was born in Boston in 1801. He died in Washington in 1883. Three years before his death congress voted him a medal of pure gold, said to be the largest and finest ever given by this government to any individual. It was presented to him with appropriate ceremonies at the White House by President Harrison and is now on exhibition at the National Museum in Washington.

VINCENT ASTOR OFFERS YACHT TO GOVERNMENT

Vincent Astor has told Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt that his famous yacht Norma for the asking if this country enters the war. In an event of war a battery of three-inch guns will be put aboard and a navy crew will man her. It is probable that she would be used as the flagship of a fleet of motor-boats which will be engaged in service on the coast.

MEDICAL BODY BEING MOBILIZED FOR WAR SERVICE

Washington—Modern warfare, as well as the warfare of the future, demands the service of specialists, not only along the firing line to operate the great guns, but back of it, step by step, in the opinion of Dr. F. F. Simpson, chief of the medical section of the Council of National Defense. The medical section, under the direction of Doctor Simpson, is engaged on the gigantic work of organizing the medical resources of the country into an efficient working unit, as one of the most important features of military preparedness. Broadly, the scheme contemplates the creation of a medical reserve corps of 20,000 surgeons, physicians and specialists in all lines, who will be available for service in the army and navy and civilian population in time of need. In addition to this, the organization will conduct a mobilization of the country's civilian medical resources, factories making medical supplies, hospitals for the care of the ill and wounded and schools for the re-education of those whose injuries on the battlefield make them unfit for the life work they had undertaken. The mobilization of the medical resources of the country is only a part of the great work which is being undertaken by the Council of National Defense, working in connection with the advisory commission to the Council of National Defense. The council proper is composed of members of the cabinet; the advisory commission is composed of civilians who are recognized leaders in certain lines, and the advisory commission is composed of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, who has devoted to the transportation problems that would face the United States in time of war. Dr. Franklin Martin of Chicago is the chairman of the advisory commission which is dealing directly with the question of medicine as related to war.

Council of Internal Defense Builds System Based on Experience in European War.

PART OF PREPAREDNESS WORK

Reserve Corps of 20,000 Surgeons, Physicians and Specialists Being Organized—Civilian Medical Resources Also Mobilized. service, there developed in the various camps 20,700 cases of typhoid fever, resulting in many deaths. Last summer, when 146,000—almost twice as many—troops were mobilized for service along the Mexican border, only 14 cases of typhoid fever developed. The circumstances, in a general way, were similar. Men were taken from a temperate climate to a warmer climate and were assembled in large camps. The remarkable decrease in the number of cases of typhoid fever was due to nothing more nor less than the adoption of proper methods of sanitation. The medical corps of the army saw the mistakes of the Spanish-American war and profited by them. It is for the further development of such improved methods that the medical section is now striving. Lessons From European War. In this connection object lessons are being derived daily from the war in Europe. Hundreds of reports are being received from medical officers. These refer to the new ways of handling the ill and wounded, the treatment of wounds on the battle fields and in hospitals. All of these suggestions are being tabulated for use in the future. Out of them the committee hopes to develop a thoroughly up-to-date system for the United States. For example, one of the suggestions which is regarded as highly practical is that for conveying wounded soldiers back from the battle lines to far distant hospitals without removing them from the stretchers on which they first are placed. This is accomplished by an interchange of stretchers, a very simple method which never had been put in operation before. In this way the strength of the patient, an important factor for the assistance of his recovery, is conserved. When a soldier is placed on a stretcher at the battle line he is carried to a waiting ambulance. The ambulance, in turn, receiving the patient, does not place him on one of its own stretchers, but gives a stretcher to the man who has carried the man. If the ambulance drives to a hospital train, which is the general custom where the railroad lines are intact almost to the trenches, the train gives the ambulance a stretcher, accepting at the same time the man and the stretcher on which he is being carried. This system works throughout the system of transportation, so that a British soldier arriving in London, perhaps on the same day, he is wounded, arrives on the same stretcher that was at the battle front. It also is the aim of the commission to work for the system of modern hospital trains, carrying wounded soldiers as far from the battle front as possible, out of the way of the operations and to a place where his recovery is most likely. Delicate operations cannot always be conducted on those trains, but it is possible to do certain things which are important in saving a man's life, such as stopping the flow of blood from a broken artery, the amputation of an arm or leg or the like. To Learn Full Medical Resources. When the commission obtains a full list of medical officers throughout the country they will be asked to supply elaborate statistics on the medical resources of the various states, hospitals, schools for the re-education of wounded soldiers, and hospitals equipped to manufacture medical supplies. The question of finding schools is one of the great considerations. Men who have been blinded will be taught to become self-sustaining at some new line of work; men without arms will be instructed in some line of endeavor which requires no arms; each case will be taken up and worked out in itself, in a general effort to reduce to a minimum the number of hopelessly crippled men as the result of war. Arrangements also are being made to effect a standardization of medical supplies. Companies manufacturing certain types of medicines, surgical instruments, splints, bandages and similar things used in medical work will be invited to send samples to the commission, to be placed on exhibition in Washington. Plans for these will be developed the best practical appliances and the various companies will be informed on what will be the needs in time of war. Medical Colleges Give Aid. Almost all of the medical supply manufacturers of the country, when the proper request was being considered, wrote to Washington expressing a willingness to co-operate in any scheme which seemed practical. Such a system will not only effect a standardization but will permit the commission, with full facts at hand, to regulate the supply in all lines, so that there will not be a surplus of stretchers, a surplus of a certain type of surgical apparatus or anything else. Moreover the country will be benefited, and most of them—about fifty, to be exact—have instituted a course of military surgery for their senior year. Army and navy medical instructors have been invited to these schools, and have given lectures on the most approved methods of handling the ill and wounded on the battlefield and in hospitals. The instruction was undertaken recently, after a conference between the deans of the schools and the members of the commission, at the invitation of Newton D. Baker, secretary of war. The care of wounded men is one of the most important questions to be considered in time of war," says Doctor Simpson. "By proper treatment, life can be conserved to a maximum degree—a fact which should appeal to all men in the medical profession, whether pacifists or not. "The commission's meeting with remarkable success in its work. Everywhere the medical profession has shown a willingness to do its part in the nation's preparedness. "What we are striving to do is to find the specialists who are needed, and that conservation of life. We want to find the groove in which each man fits best, and place him in it when necessary."

SUCCESSFUL WOMAN LAWYER

Miss Margaret Hamilton Ervin, Jr., of Chattanooga, Tenn., a successful criminal lawyer after two years and a half of practice. She is the only woman lawyer now practicing in Tennessee who has appeared before the state supreme court. Miss Ervin was reared on Look-out mountain and obtained her legal education in Tennessee. She is president of the Tennessee Equal Suffrage association and a member of the national council of the National American Woman Suffrage association. At the last Democratic convention she sat with the Tennessee delegation.

Each of the divisions represented by the members of the advisory commission had a specific division a certain department, directed to carry out its particular work. Doctor Simpson is the chief of the medical section and is working with what is known as the medical advisory committee of the advisory commission. The members are: Doctor Martin, chairman; Surgeon General William C. Gorgas of the Army, Surgeon General William C. Braisted of the navy, Surgeon General Francis M. Dwyer of the army, and the health officer, Col. Jefferson R. Keen, director general of military relief of the American Red Cross; Dr. William H. Welch of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. W. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., and Doctor Simpson. This organization is co-operating with the committee of American physicians for American preparedness, of which Doctor Mayo is chairman and Doctor Simpson is secretary. This committee represents, directly or indirectly, approximately 90,000 members of the medical profession of the United States and was organized more than a year ago as a great patriotic movement for the conservation of life in time of war. Doctor Simpson, with a staff in his office in Washington, just now is engaged in organizing a medical reserve corps, which will number 20,000 of the foremost surgeons, physicians and other specialists in the country. This is being accomplished through the creation of a committee of nine medical leaders in every state, who will have direct charge of formulating country preparations. All physicians are being classified according to the work that they do best. Surgeons who are especially proficient in abdominal operations are listed as such; ear, eye, nose and throat specialists all go in one list; dentists—in fact, every branch of the medical profession is dissected and classified, so as to be on hand for particular, special work when the time of need arrives. Proper Sanitation Important. One of the important questions being considered is that of sanitation, and all medical men who are students of this work will be listed as such. Proper sanitation in the mobilization of any army will save thousands of lives, as demonstrated by a very recent example. In 1868, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, when approximately 100,000 troops were mobilized for

That was the end of supper. No one attempted to eat another bite. After the older girls had gone into the sitting room, Carol and Lark went about their work with stricken faces. They asked if they might speak to Constance, but Prudence went in with them to say good night to her. The twins broke down and cried as they saw the pitiful little figure with the worn and tear-stained face. They threw their arms around her passionately and kissed her many times. But they went to bed without saying anything. It was a sorry night for the twins. The next morning they set off to school, with no chance for anything but a brief good morning with Connie—given in the presence of Prudence. Half-way down the parsonage walk, Carol said: 'Oh, wait a minute, Lark. I left my notebook on the table.' And Lark walked slowly while Carol went rushing back. She found Prudence in the kitchen, and whispered: 'Here—here's a note, Prudence. Don't read it until after I've gone to school—at ten o'clock you may read it. Will you promise?' Prudence laughed a little, but she promised, and laid the note carefully away to wait the appointed hour for its perusal. As the clock struck ten she went to the mantle and took it down. This is what Carol had written: 'Oh, Prudence, do please forgive me, and don't punish Connie any more. You can punish me any way you like, and I'm glad of it. It was all my fault. I made her go and get the apples for me, and I ate them all. Connie said she would like the said stolen apples would not taste very good. It was all my fault, and I'm so sorry. As Prudence read this her face grew very stern. Carol's fault! At that moment Prudence heard someone coming, and she rushed to the door, and thrust the note hastily into her dress. It was Lark, and she hung herself wildly upon Prudence, sobbing bitterly. 'What is the matter, Lark?' she cried, really frightened. 'Are you sick?' 'Heartick, that's all,' wailed Lark. 'I told the teacher I was sick so I could come home, but I'm not. Oh, Prudence, I know you'll despise and abhor me all the rest of your life, and everybody will, and I deserve it. For I stole those apples myself.' Prudence was surprised and puzzled. She drew the note from her pocket and gave it to Lark. 'Carol gave me that before she went to school,' she explained. 'Read it, and tell me what you are driving at. I think you are both crazy. Or maybe you are just trying to shield poor Connie.' Lark read Carol's note, and gasped, and burst out laughing! 'The shame the bitter weeping, and perverseness, had rendered her hysterical, and now she laughed and cried until Prudence was alarmed again. In time, however, Lark was able to explain to her both sides. She showed the 'Skull and Crossbones. And we both told the truth about it.' Prudence laughed. But when she thought of loyal little Connie, nobbling all through the night, she tears came to her eyes again. She went quickly to the telephone and called up the school building next door to the bar—

Canada Offers 160 Acres Free to Farm Hands

Bonus of Western Canada Land to Men Assisting in Maintaining Needed Grain Production. The demand for farm labor in Canada is great. As an inducement to secure the necessary help at once, Canada will give ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES OF LAND FREE AS A HOMESTEAD and allow the time of the farm laborer, who has filed on the land, to apply as residence duties, the same as if he actually had lived on it.

Unhandy Location. A silo located in a building is often unhandy to fill. The forage cannot be delivered to the cutter conveniently. By locating a silo outside of the building and only connecting it thereto with a passage provided with doors, the objectionable odor of the silage may be kept out of the building.

The fundamental principle in the preservation of green forage when placed in a silo is the exclusion of air. It is the purpose of any silo, regardless of its construction, to exclude air as far as possible from the silage and in this way prevent decay.

Construction of Walls. The foundation wall, and in fact the walls of the entire silo, should be as smooth as possible. If due care is used in dumping the silage during the filling, doors which extend into the silo are not a serious objection, though perfectly flush doors are certainly an advantage.

Deep Silo Best. By building a deep silo a greater percentage of good silage is obtained, which is, of course, a matter of economy. Good practice at present seems to dictate that the depth should be at least 30 feet. A large percentage of good silo are built considerably deeper, even 50 to 60 feet.

SWEET CLOVER CROP ASSISTS FERTILITY. Yields Larger Amount of Hay and Improves Condition of Soil—Aid to Drainage. Besides yielding a larger crop of hay than other legumes, sweet clover improves the condition of the soil and increases its fertility.

Capacity Varies. The capacity of a silo varies as the square of the diameter while the wall surface varies directly as the diameter. This means that as far as capacity is concerned the silo would be of as large a diameter as possible.

WHO'S WHO?

WHO IS THE RIGHT MAN?

Who Is The Man That Can Deliver The Right Kind of Goods?

On Tuesday, April 17th, the election of officers, who will conduct the affairs of the village for the coming 1918 years, will be held, and people who have the best interests of the village at heart will give the selection of officers serious and calm considerations. The officers to be selected are: The President of the Board of Trustees, commonly called mayor, a city clerk to fill out the unexpired term of one year, three trustees, known as alderman, and one police magistrate. Three full tickets are in the field and this leaves a good chance to select the right men. For mayor; Mr. Frank Begnoche, Mr. Joseph Supremant, and Mr. W. H. Baker have announced themselves. For Trustees, George Bertrand, Fern Magruder, Adolph Bock, Gene Pechang, Edward Wright, Jr., Joseph Lagasse, Emil Gonderman, F. L. Martin and Peter Miller are the candidates.

The officers of the village will have many very important matters to decide during the next two years, and great care should be exercised so that only capable and honest men are selected to handle the large amount of important business that will come up. The most important project that will require the attention of the council will be the letting of a contract for the construction of the sewer, which involves the expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars. The power of letting a contract of this size, would be a great temptation to derive personal gain, by men who are not strictly honest. Therefore the very first thing to be considered in selection of officers is strict honesty. The next great duty of the village council is to see that the village is properly run from a moral stand point. If affairs are permitted to run themselves a condition soon arises where the village is not an ideal place for children. Here again is a very reason why care should be exercised that only honest men, and capable men are elected to office. Get acquainted with the men, who are asking you to turn over the handling of the affairs of the village to their keeping, and be sure they are honest and capable. Do not be misled by pre election promises, as these promises may be made with fingers crossed. When too many promises are made, you may be sure they can not be kept and are only made to secure votes. Men that lie, will invariably steal, and if you catch any candidates deliberately telling lies in order to secure votes, it is a pretty safe bet that he would steal if given the opportunity.

Study the situation carefully and select the honest and capable men to handle village affairs.
