

U. B. CHURCH RE-DEDICATION

SERVICES WILL BE HELD SUNDAY, JULY FIRST AT THE NEW CHURCH

Dr. Wright of Grace Church and Superintendent Overton Will Be the Principal Speakers

On Sunday, July 1st, the United Brethren Church of this city, which has been recently moved to its new location on Center Ave. in the heart of the city, will be rededicated. An excellent programme has been prepared for the occasion and the day will be one that will be long remembered by, not only the members of this congregation, but by church workers and church goers of all denominations in this part of the state. Dr. Wright of Grace Church, Chicago will be the speaker of the evening and those who have been so fortunate in the past as to have heard Dr. Wright speak know what a treat is in store for them, while to many who have not been fortunate enough to have heard this eminent man, a great and delightful surprise is awaiting them. Dr. Wright is indeed one of the forcible and earnest speakers engaged in church work in this state and to hear him is one of the rare treats and great pleasures that is granted us. One is most forcibly impressed with his earnestness and devotion to duty. A great treat lies in store for those who will have the pleasure of hearing Supt. Overton.

Much hard work has been done toward bringing the choir of the church up to its present high standard and a great treat awaits a lover of good singing. The choir is the life of a church organization, and the United Brethren Church is fortunate indeed in having such an excellent organization as their choir. Every member of the church has worked hard to bring the organization up to its present high state of efficiency and usefulness, and it would be hard indeed to select any one individual or department, as being worthy of more praise or credit, than the other.

Perfect team work, all working together for the good of the organization as a whole, have made it possible for the pastor and trustees to bring to a successful conclusion the work of moving the church to its present good condition. While space will not permit mention of all who so liberally donated the work and finances that made this great move possible, and we must necessarily confine our writing to the pastor and trustees on whose shoulders fell the full responsibilities of bringing this important piece of work to a successful conclusion. We realize that each and every member of this congregation did their full duty valiantly and truly and in the hearts of the pastor and trustees is engraven the fact that when they needed the moral and financial support of their co-workers, it was forthcoming cheerfully and enthusiastically and to all, men, women and children, who so generously responded to the call for aid, the knowledge that this support has caused happiness to the men who had this work in charge should be gratification indeed.

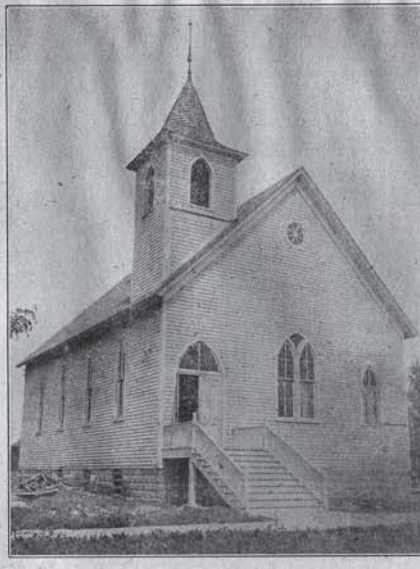

To those not interested or engaged in church work, the moving of a church from one location to another and the complete remodeling of the building may seem like a matter of small importance. Only church workers and pastors know of the many difficulties that must be met in church work. The average person has heard the slogan "Salvation's Free" for so many, many years that they have confused "Salvation" with detail expense necessary to keep an organization intact and progressing and as a consequence, nothing in the world is harder to finance than a church. Therefore, when an occasion of this kind presents itself, involving the expenditure of a thousand dollars or more, men who are not capable of handling good stiff business propositions had better leave this class of work alone, and confine themselves to other business. Or possibly one who is not a member of a church may fail to understand why a congregation should wish to go to the great expense of moving and remodeling a church when they had a church which was answering the purpose. People with this idea in mind do not comprehend the unselfish spirit of true Christians. Men and women who are religiously inclined, could worship their God in their own homes without the expense of erecting churches if they were selfish enough to do so, but true Christianity has no selfishness in it and self is forgotten in the endeavor to help others. Therefore the work that has been done by the members of the United Brethren Church in bringing their church building from the outskirts of the city up to the centre of the city was done for an unselfish reason. Not to show style, but that others not true Christians, might be induced to attend the church and be brought into the fold of Christianity. The old location was well known to all present members of the congregation, and no hardship was entailed upon them, in attending service at the old location, but for the man and woman who have not been converted the church was in the wrong place and was not productive of the good the members feel it should do.

In the present day the church must take the lead in the progress and advancement of the human race. Any right thinking man must admit that religion and education have always been the handmaid's yes, we will say that they have been the progenitors of progress and civilization. Any student of American history can not help but be impressed with the sweet spirit of religion which the pilgrim fathers brought with them from across the sea and how churches and the little log school houses preceded any staple form of government. One can not help but be impressed with the fact that in the picture showing the landing of the early settlers, in this country, prayer is the paramount spirit. In every village and hamlet of our great country has this spirit been carried out, and always where people congregated and new towns are established, the church is one of the first organizations that are effected.

Bradley is no exception to this rule and the history of the United Brethren church of Bradley is closely interwoven with the earliest history of Bradley, and has kept step with the city's progress. The church's past, like all other history is divided into epochs. It had its fits and starts, its periods of progress, with success or stagnation, but the true spirit of never give up has triumphed over all obstacles and has permitted the church to weather all storms, and today a bright future is the reward that the true band of men and women who piloted the church thru its period of stagnation, have in store.

The early history of the church dates back to the year 1876 when the first organization was effected and a church established at Rockville, Ill. During the year 1883, the same year that Bradley showed evidence of becoming a village, the church moved to Bradley and the present building was erected in the western part of the village, in what was then the most thickly settled portion of the village.

Miss Elliott was the first pastor of the church here at Bradley. For many years after coming to Bradley the church prospered and enjoyed a large membership, but the town gradually grew to the east, and location being against the success of the church, the membership gradually dwindled until a resident pastor could not be retained, and the church was assigned pastors for Sunday services from other places. Finally in the year 1915, the church had declined to such an extent that no pastor was assigned by the conference and things looked dark indeed for the United Brethren Church of Bradley. At this conference however was Rev. John Codd, then assistant to Dr. Wright at Grace Church, Chicago, who volunteered his services to keep the organization intact. He was permitted to take charge of the work and came down from Chicago every week at a great personal sacrifice to do the work assigned him. His determination to do for the people of Bradley, what they would not do for themselves, had its effect.

The congregation was not dead, only sleeping, they woke up and took a hold of the work with new energy, and as a result succeeded in paying the pastor's salary during the year. At the next conference Rev. Codd was offered a charge at Quincy, Ill., but requested that he be returned to Bradley. He then moved his family there, making this place his home, and took charge of the work in earnest, ably assisted by his good wife. New life was shown in every branch of the work and it soon became apparent that more room was needed in the church to accommodate the increased membership, and the larger Sunday School classes. As the church was located away from the beaten paths of travel, it was decided to secure a more favorably location. The property was sold and new property purchased on Centre Ave., one-half block from Broadway. Here a large basement, 32x50 was built and the church was removed to the new location. The old Sunday school rooms in the rear of the building were removed and the church thus made to accommodate a larger congregation. The new basement is well finished and will be used for the Sunday school classes and for social purposes. The future of the United Brethren Church in Bradley looks bright indeed, and shows what can be done by a small congregation when the right spirit prevails.

A history of the church however would not be complete unless accompanied by a brief outline of the work that has been done by the men that planned and executed the work. We fully appreciate the fact that the average man in a small community does not like to have his virtues paraded before his fellow man and we therefore will confine our remarks exclusively to the pastor and trustees directly in securing the new church building.

While the great work and responsibility has rested upon these men, it is only fair to also give great credit for what has been accomplished to membership in its entirety as the moral and financial support, and the extra labor furnished by the congregation made the work possible. We will now outline briefly the work done by the pastor and trustees.

Rev. John Codd

Rev. John Codd, pastor of the United Brethren church of this city has had charge of the church for the past two years, and his hard work and perseverance has not only kept the church organization intact, but has caused it to become an organization with a strong future before it. He does not know what it means to give up, and his perseverance is bringing its reward, and today a good church organization is in existence, where formerly the doors were about ready to be closed. Rev. Codd's services as minister are recognized by his congregation and the his labors may seem hard at times, he can rest assured that he has the confidence and respect of all of his congregation. The church would be in bad shape today, but for him and this fact is thoroughly recognized and appreciated by all. Rev. Codd is not only a very good preacher but also an excellent business man and has made the moving of the church building a possibility thru this talent.

Mrs. John Codd

With all due respect to the ability of Rev. John Codd, we state freely that he is only as good a pastor as his wife has made of him, for it is thru the untiring energy of his life partner that the large amount of good is being done. Perfect team work has produced excellent results. Mrs. Codd is active in church work and the greatest of help to Rev. Codd.

Frank Erickson

Mr. Frank Erickson has many times been called to the balance wheel of the board of trustees. While he is progressive and ever ready to assist in any way to advance the interest of the church, he is far sighted and anything pertaining to radicalism does not enter his make up. Mr. Erickson was born in Sweden. He came to Bradley in 1897 since which time he has held a responsible position with the David Bradley Mfg. Wks. He united himself with the church in 1911, and has always been a great help to the pastor.

Elmer Taylor

Mr. Elmer Taylor, Sunday school superintendent of the U. B. church is also the youngest member of the board of trustees. He is a native of Kentucky. He moved to Bradley in 1913 and was adopted to membership in 1915. He is a useful man in the church and a great help to the pastor.

John Schraeder

This is smiling John Schraeder the financial king of the U. B. church, the present treasurer. He came to Bradley in 1913 and joined the church in 1915, and has been a good faithful member ever since joining. His cheerful disposition and care free manner are great help to the pastor and coworker, and as he is not easily discouraged, frequently prevents discouragement in others.

Obediah Lancaster

To Mr. Obediah Lancaster comes the honor of being the oldest living member of the church. He was born in what is now Bradley about 66 years ago and joined the church in 1876. He was choir leader until recent years, when he was compelled to give up active work in this branch account of ill health. At the present time he is chairman of the board of trustees. Mr. Lancaster has seen much sickness in the past few years but has been faithful to his church at all times.

NEED 971,000,000 BUSHELS OF GRAIN

Necessary Food for Allies and Neutrals as Figured by Hoover.

URGES US TO ECONOMIZE

Suggests Double Consumption of Vegetables in Summer as Aid to Europe—Big Crop of Foodstuffs is Expected.

Washington.—The allies of America, in the war against Germany, and the European neutrals will require a total of 971,000,000 bushels of bread and fodder grains out of the next harvest, and, in addition to that great amount, provision must be made for the grain ships destroyed by submarines, according to an official announcement made by Herbert C. Hoover, whom President Wilson has designated as food administrator.

Mr. Hoover presented the situation in detail for the first time, the figures representing the result of his researches while in Europe. He admitted that it would be impossible for North America to furnish all grain needed and provide for itself, but he added that the country must shoulder the major part of the burden. Coincident with his decision to acquaint the country with all of the facts in the situation, Mr. Hoover said that the task of conserving and apportioning America's grain supply would be undertaken as soon as powers were granted by congress. Representatives of the allies, he said, who were entering into forward contracts pending the adoption of this legislation were doing so at their own risk. As soon as the food administration was in full operation, he said, the situation would be canvassed, and, if necessary, many purchases by other countries would be canceled to serve the common cause.

Fodder Not Included.

The Hoover statement was in explanation of an interview given by Emile Level, head of the Permanent French commission. Mr. Hoover said, "In view of the statement of the allies' grain requirement out of the next harvest given by Mr. Level of the French mission to the press as amounting to 660,000,000 bushels, and its apparent conflict with the figures of 1,000,000,000 bushels given out by myself, it seems desirable to mention that Mr. Level assured me that he included in his figures only the grain necessary for the bread supply and did not include the fodder grains. These are just as necessary to the allies for the maintenance of their dairy and meat supplies and the feeding of their cavalry horses as is the grain for the bread supply of the people.

RECRUIT IS MARRIED AS HIS UNIT DRILLS

Chicago.—Standing beneath an archway of crossed bayonets, Private Harold H. Clarke of the Second Illinois Infantry and Miss Jessie Aldrich were married, while below the balcony on which they were standing 500 members of the bridegroom's regiment drilled.

"And may God bless you both, who are doing your duty by your native land," said the clergyman. There was a scattering of bayonets from the couple's military escort and sobbing from the women guests.

Mrs. Clarke had consented to be married when her fiancé was merely informed that marriage or no marriage, he could not delay enlisting.

will be greatly reduced in its application to vegetables.

Use Vegetables Instead. "The increase in vegetable production is, of course, not uniform throughout the whole country, and price conditions in the larger cities may not permit of a large proportion of substitution of vegetables as in the country districts and smaller towns. It is even more important, therefore, that in the country districts and smaller towns vegetables should be substituted for the staples, because this will greatly relieve the question of transportation. If the rural population, including in this term the larger towns and smaller cities, would during the months of July, August and September reduce the consumption of sugar one ounce, bread four ounces, and meat one and a half ounces a day, and vegetables be substituted instead, the economy would represent the saving of 20,000,000 bushels of wheat, 125,000,000 tons of sugar, and 700,000,000.

WHISKER BAN IN HOBOKEN

All Growths Between Eyes and Adam's Apple Must Be Chopped Down.

Hoboken.—The mustaches of Hoboken—long burdened with foam and tortured with Wilhelm beads—now are going away from here. First the city employees are to become barefaced, and after that the entire population is expected to come out into the open and live long, frank-chinned and sanitary lives.

The fall in Hoboken was signaled when Dr. Joseph Stack, chief medical inspector of the board of health, notified the city employees that all that stood between them and perfect health was their germ-carrying lip hedge. In an announcement circulated by a heavily bearded messenger that inspector called attention to the unspeakable beaver and begged all who observed to remove instantly all the facial underbrush. Persons who have been comfortable for years felt itchy after reading the physician's masterpiece.

YOUNGEST MARINE

"I want the American people to increase the proportion of vegetables in their diet during the coming summer for many reasons. Vegetables, including potatoes, compose but a small fraction of the garden area, and considered as a nation, of our total foodstuffs in terms of units, only about 14 per cent is supplied in the form of vegetables, while some 40 per cent arises from cereal products, including wheat, corn and rice, from various animal products, and 15 per cent from sugar.

"The widespread agitation throughout the country to increase production of foodstuffs has resulted in a large expansion of the garden area, and with normal weather conditions we may hope for a greatly increased supply of garden vegetables. These may be disposed of either by direct consumption during the summer months or conservatively for winter use. Much the more simple and direct thing to do is to increase the proportion of vegetables in our diet during the months of July, August, and September and thus save a portion of the cereals, meat and sugar for winter use.

"To double the proportion of vegetables and thus diminish proportionally the drain of bread and meat supplies is in no way suggested; vegetarianism; public health will not only be normal but especially during the summer months will even be improved if the proportion of vegetables in the general diet is doubled. Such a diet would contain a large amount of mineral salts and vitamins, the albuminous substances would be balanced, and the diet would contain so large an amount of inert material as to form a mass of advantageous proportions in the digestive tract.

"The other alternative would be to conserve the vegetables for winter use. While everything should be done that is possible in the way of drying vegetables it must be borne in mind that owing to the shortage in tin the normal canning capacity of the country will be greatly reduced in its application to vegetables.

In Search of a Romeo. Chicago.—In search of a Romeo, Hazel Brown, escaped inmate of the Bartouville Hospital for the Incurable Insane, came to Chicago and spent $400 for a trousseau and bought a $500 engagement ring. When arrested she was by eight policemen and wrecked a police station before she was subdued.

SWEET POTATO ACREAGE TO BE INCREASED

SWEET POTATO PLANTER IN ACTION.

The acreage of sweet potatoes should be doubled this year, assert members of the department of horticulture in the Kansas State Agricultural college. Growers of Irish potatoes have reduced their acreage by a good many acres, they point out. It is not expected, warn the horticulturists, that the inexperienced grower will make a plunge this year, but if each grower and farmer living on suitable land will increase his acres, however little, much may be done to equalize potato prices this fall and winter. Every indication is for prices high enough to insure a profit. Each grower should provide himself with some sort of warm, dry storage facilities. The prices of farm products at harvest time, when the majority of farmers sell, is always low. A storage for any product may easily pay for itself the first year.

Many gardeners and growers are beginning to worry about injury to trade because of garden enthusiasm in small towns. This will be true to a great extent only as to the early vegetables, say horticulturists. Very few office people and laborers care to go out early in the morning or late at night during July or August. It must also be remembered that vacations are taken from June to September and during the vacation weeds grow rapidly. To offset the vegetables grown at home, moreover, is the determination of each family to eat fruits and vegetables in the home more than ever before. This will increase demand. This year promises a shortage in many sorts of fruits. Because of the high prices during the past year much attention will be given during the present season to home canning and preserving.

HENS RECOMMENDED BY COUNTY AGENTS

Less Done for Development of Poultry Industry Than for Any Other Farm Stock.

The poultry committee of the recent farm bureau conference at University farm, St. Paul, believes that more work for the development of the poultry industry is needed, because: Considering its importance, less has been done for it than for any other live stock industry, by farm bureaus. Poultry production costs no more per pound than the production of other live stock, yet the meat sells at a much higher rate. The committee, moreover, believes that the farm flock should be encouraged rather than the large specialized poultry enterprise; that poultry work is especially adapted to boys' and girls' club work, and that farm bureaus in encouraging the work should overlook the development of the co-operative marketing of eggs through local creameries, or assistance for poultry shows and associations.

SOME HESITATE TO TRY SWEET CLOVER

No Foundation for Fear That There Will Be Difficulty in Eradicating Crop.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.) Some farmers hesitate to plant sweet clover on their farms for fear they will have difficulty in eradicating it when the fields are planted to other crops. The results obtained annually by hundreds of farmers are sufficient proof that there is no foundation for such fear; in fact, farmers are experiencing much difficulty in cutting the first crop the second season so high that the plants will not be killed. The new crop of sweet clover, unlike that of red clover and alfalfa, must come from the buds left on the stubble, so when the plants are cut below these buds they will be killed. As sweet clover is a biennial, the plants die as soon as the seed crop is produced. When the first year's growth of sweet clover is turned under for green manure it is recommended that the field be plowed after the plants have made some growth the following spring rather than in the fall of the year of seeding. When the first year's growth is plowed under the same fall many of the plants will not be entirely covered, and these will make a vigorous growth the following spring. When the plowing is delayed until the plants have made some growth the following spring no trouble will be experienced in eradicating them.

PARIS GREEN HIGH; SUBSTITUTE READY

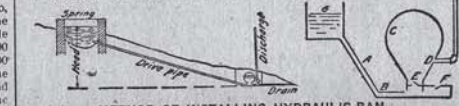

Arsenate of Lead is Excellent Stomach Insecticide and Has Not Advanced in Price.

Paris green costs more than twice as much this year as last. It is selling at 50 cents a pound even in large quantities. It is doubtful whether it can be purchased for less than 45 cents a pound. Fortunately, says A. G. Ruggles, University farm, St. Paul, arsenate of lead, a better stomach insecticide than paris green, has not advanced in price. The powdered form may be obtained for about 25 cents a pound, and one and one-half pounds of the powder is used in making 50 gallons of spray mixture.

"In experiments at University farm," adds Mr. Ruggles, "we have found arsenate of lead better than paris green as a remedy for potato bugs, and all orchard insects. It is not necessary, therefore, to avoid injurious biting insects to live simply because paris green is costly. The orchardist should get his spray materials as early as possible. It is not easy to tell when arsenate of lead may go killing after paris green.

WATER EQUIPMENT FOR FARM BUILDINGS

(By J. L. MOWREY.) If there is a good spring or creek, safe and clean, on the farm, or a flowing well below which a little slope may be found, together with an oversupply of water from the well, it is not a hard matter to put in an equipment for running water for the house, barns and other farm buildings by the use of a hydraulic ram. In installing a farm-house water supply, any hand pump of force type may be used. Since so much more water is used through a faucet than from a pail, having to pump by hand, usually puts the veto on a house system depending on hand pumping. A gas engine or windmill will also work in any system, pumping air of water, or both. But in the case of spring, creek or overflow well water, a hydraulic ram is well worth consideration. A ram will probably cost the farmer any-

DAUGHTER WAS CALLED

LAURA SENESAC PASSED AWAY IN PRIME OF LIFE.

Was Only Sick One Day. Funeral Conducted in Bourbonnais Monday Morning.

A gloom of sorrow spread over the village of Bourbonnais late Friday afternoon with the announcement that the 19-year old daughter, Laura, of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Senesac, had passed away at 4:30 o'clock, following a brief illness.

Miss Senesac was sick but the one day, although she had been afflicted for years with a tumor upon the brain and for which she was operated upon three years ago, she was apparently recovered and was getting along nicely until recently, when there was evidences of a recurrence of her former trouble.

Funeral services were conducted in Bourbonnais Monday morning with Requiem mass by Rev. Father Charlebois and remarks by Rev. Father Hazen.

Miss Senesac was a devout Christian and would have entered the service of her master in the capacity of a nun had she regained her health.

She is survived by her grief-stricken parents and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. Amede Suprenant of Mazon, Mrs. Charles Lockwood of West Kankakee, Cecelia, Beatrice, Edna, Isabelle, Marguerite Raymond and W. P. Senesac.

OLD CITIZEN PASSES AWAY AT HER HOME.

Funeral Services Tuesday Interment at Bourbonnais Cemetery.

Mrs. Alexis Laroche, one of the oldest citizens and one of the early settlers of Bourbonnais township, died at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning at her home on Beaudoin avenue, Bourbonnais.

Although past 87 years of age, she had been in fair health until Saturday morning, shortly after she had arisen from bed, she complained of a pain in her stomach. She however, became better. As she arose from her chair to leave her bedroom, she had a weak spell and fell to the floor, striking her forehead on a piece of furniture, which caused her death. She regained consciousness shortly afterwards. Her daughters and other relatives were called to her bedside and surrounded her when she expired. Emilie Cloutre was born at L'Acadie, Province of Quebec, Oct. 15, 1829. In 1848, she married Alexis Laroche of the same parish. In 1867, Mr. and Mrs. Laroche with their children, immigrated to Illinois, settling on a farm near St. George. A few years afterwards they moved to Bourbonnais, Mr. Laroche continuing as a farmer. About 30 years ago they came to live in the village of Bourbonnais, where the family continued their home. Mr. Laroche died several years ago. Fourteen children were born to them of whom the following survive their mother: Sister St. Pierre Gonzales of the Congregation of Notre Dame, St. Joseph Seminary, Kankakee; Mesdames Joseph Rouleau of Chicago; Pierre Cheffre, Jos. Lambert and Bonner of Kankakee and Mrs. Achille Boucher of Bourbonnais.

Mrs. Alexandre Brodeur of Tucker died in November 1915, as also Miss Marguerite Laroche, who lived with her mother until her death in January 1915. Another daughter, Sister Ste. Marie Angele, of the Congregation of Saint Nom de Jesus of Montreal, died in Florida in 1905. The other children died when in youth. The deceased was a member of Congregation of the Woman's Ste Anne and the Order of St. Francois d'Assise of Bourbonnais.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock from the church of the Maternity.

All the occupants were thrown out and badly shaken up. Marlow, the driver, received the steering wheel on his stomach and was unconscious for a time. All three were disabled.

"The Record Who HALLOOED"

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
AUTHOR OF "K" "THE MAN IN LOWER TEN" ETC.

BEAUTIFUL ELINOR KINGSTON AND HER FRIENDS
FACE EXPOSURE AND SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES.

Synopsis—Four years old Hilary Kingston lived with his daughter, Elinor, in a beautiful home on a hill in the suburban village of Wolfingham. The neighbors knew nothing about the establishment, except that the father was quite wealthy, and the daughter very good-looking and gentle. In reality Kingston was head of an anarchist band, composed of Huff, Boroday, Talbot and Lethbridge, that robbed the rich and gave to the poor and oppressed. One day Old Hilary was shot dead, and the course of life changed abruptly for his daughter.

The routine never varied. Elinor unlocked the door to a winding staircase, which led to a basement room where the steel vault stood in its cement walls. The door opened, returning shortly with the cash-boxes. The money was divided on the library table. It went by percentages. Hilary drew 20 that last year, each of the others 10—a total of 90 per cent. The 40 per cent of the money was divided, or sent as a whole, according to the sense of the meeting. Berlin got it all one year, for instance, to Boroday's disgust. Russia generally received a large proportion. The Chinese revolution; the defense of Beckhardt, who killed Ecker the pork-packer; a shipment of guns and ammunition to Central America—thus it went.

Although they preferred only money, now and then the loot included jewels. By common consent, such gems, stripped of their settings, were put aside for Elinor. They meant nothing to her. Had anyone told her that for several years her share had been greater in actual value than all the money that had fallen to her father she would not have believed it.

Four days or so after the annual meeting, the record of Saint Jude's was always added to dinner. And although the reverend gentleman would under normal circumstances have been fishing in Canada, he never went until this function was over. For old Hilary, detesting his creed, respected the man a certain percentage, then, of old Hilary's share went over the library table, after the dinner, to the record.

"Use it where it will do the most good," he would say.

"The church organ—"

"Not a cent to the church organ. Buy the youngsters a playground, or—build a lying-in ward in the hospital."

Elinor's mother had died in childbirth. The last check had been unusually generous. The record, who had been smoking one of Old Hilary's choice cigars, put it down and faced his host elegantly. It took courage.

"Mr. Kingston," he said, "the church needs men like you. Why be a Christian in the spirit and—avoid the letter?"

"Tut." Old Hilary rose and looked down at him. "I am like all gamblers. This annual check to your poor is the sop I throw to luck. That's all, sir."

And his tone changed, the discussion. The word "gambling" worried the record. He thought over it on his way down the hill to the rectory. But his poor were very poor. He cashed the check the next day.

Elinor was in the library that sunny August day when they brought old Hilary to her. She had never seen death before, except on the streets of Mexico, and for a good many years he had been all she had—since her last governess, in fact, had been discovered secreting the rosary and had been word-scourged from the house in tears. She fainted, and wrinkled Henriette laid her on a couch.

Boroday, the Russian, had brought the body home, and now he stood, looking down at Elinor and stroking his English-cut beard.

"He expected it, Henriette," he said. "He thought it would have come sooner, in the Parker matter. I wonder—"

He glanced through the open door to the billiard room, where old Hilary's body lay on the table. He was minded, was Boroday, to wonder many things—whether, after all, old Hilary's dauntless spirit had gone out like a lamp, or if—

This white and curven thing in the next room, with no hair and no hands and the gray dandy at its feet, surely there was no mystery about it. This was not old Hilary; that was all. But where, then, was old Hilary? The Russian, who had been raised within the pale and on an ancient faith, and who had now lost his best friend, felt all the bitterness of his unbelief.

Elinor stirred.

tered the end of his ecclesiastical nose he was quite happy.

The assistant, Mr. Ward, whistled as he climbed the hill. As the hill was steep, this proved two things—his youth, and his lightness of heart. True, old Hilary Kingston was dead, and violently done to death. But to Mr. Ward death was but the gateway to a larger life; and only very sad in the young, and not yet lived.

Mr. Ward was young, a broad-shouldered young man, with clear, rather deep-set eyes, and a firm mouth. The people of Saint Jude's prophesied that the world would hear of Mr. Ward. There was only one bar to his progress; he had too much humor. It seemed to the people of Saint Jude's that religion is a serious thing, forgetting that good cheer is one of the things it must bring, and it be religion.

Boroday met Ward in the hall. Old Hilary was upstairs by that time, lying in his great bed. All the doors and windows were open, and sunshine filled the rooms. Ward thought it an unusually sane house of mourning.

"I'd like to see the sun," he said. "So many people close their eyes."

"Miss Kingston wished things undisturbed."

"I came to tell her—but I suppose she doesn't care to see anyone—the doctor is away on a holiday. I'll visit him, of course."

Boroday led the way into the library where the record had so recently received his check. He turned and eyed Ward.

"Why bring the record back?" he asked. "It is a little late for—the comforts of religion."

"Mr. Kingston gave lavishly to the church. Whatever the church can do—"

"I rather think," said Boroday politely, "that he gave, not to the church, but to the poor."

"Inasmuch as ye give unto one of the least of these," Ward replied, and returned Boroday's gaze.

Elinor had pulled herself together. By the one standard that had ruled her life she acted now—her father's wishes.

Ward, brought face to face with her, found her unapproachable, calm, almost cool, but not very lovely, for and let his ardent young eyes rest on her other than was wise. Her situation appealed to him. She seemed to be quite alone, save for the Russian with the beard.

"If I can do anything," he said, "wire to your relatives—anything of that sort—"

"I have no relatives. My mother died when I was born. I—I have a curious feeling that everything in the world has stopped—as though I'd reached the end of things."

It seemed to Mr. Ward that he should offer some of the comfort of his faith to this shrinking, wide-eyed girl before him. But when Rumors had come to him, of course.

"Death is only a tragedy when we think of it as an end and not as a beginning," he said. "It is always sad. I hope you understand that I know how to feel about it. I have lived one's life, active and well and useful to the end, and then to depart, in the fullness of days, for new activities—somewhere else—"

Elinor shivered in the warm sunshine.

"You see," she said drearily, "I do not believe those things. I should like to just now." Then, almost defiantly: "He was useful. You will never know the things he did that were helpful. But perhaps we would not agree on that, either."

The Russian was walking up and down the hall, impassive, watchful. Under his stoic indifference, he was suffering tortures. A bullet from the automatic had gone through his left arm, grazing the bone. Luckily, the bullet was not in the wound. Henriette had bled, and cleaned it, but he was in agony, with his sweating pain, bereavement, defeat. His face expressed only generous and conventional regret.

Now and then he glanced in at the library door, but generally he watched the road up the hill. As he had watched the Church ascending, so now at any time might come Law. He would be prepared.

He had grown a beard since the St. Louis matter. That would help. And he had waited to return and claim old Hilary's body, until the Record extra had announced his killing. Walking up and down the wide hall, his keen eyes were going back, detail by detail, over the day. Talbot and Lethbridge in the car had kept on. They had had changes of clothing in the machine. By now they should be at the country club, and halfway around the links. The car, with its changed license plates, would be standing in the eminently respectable country club garage.

The Reverend Mr. Ward makes some interesting discoveries. His new associations with members of the robber gang are described in the next installment.

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

Separate Skirts of All Sorts.

Now is the summer of the separate skirt at hand, with sports skirts and street skirts and tub skirts ready for the hot weather, that is overdone, and silk skirts for more dignified dress. Hardly a wardrobe but has an example of each of these. Tub skirts, in heavy cottons, are smartly tailored, with big patch pockets, buttons and machine stitching to give them the proper finish for street wear. They are shown in pique, poplin, galatea cloth, basket and other heavy weaves. In the same kinds of cloth, stripes and figured patterns give room for play of the designer's fancy in sports skirts.

That fancy appears to have strayed pocketward and to have lingered there. Especially in sports skirts in a plain color the pocket's the thing that pronounces the skirt as destined for the shore or camp or the link. Some of these pockets are so large that they look like panniers and suggest that a hat might be carried in one and a sweater in the other. Mostly they are moderately large, square-patch pockets, and occasionally they are made in a fanciful shape.

White cotton gabardine is liked for many of the new sports skirts to be worn with bright-colored sweaters. Khaki, with brass buttons and fastened uniform pockets makes the correct "hiking" skirt. For country club wear there are white wash satin, tub silk and heavy linen skirts.

Machine stitching in vivid silks lends the required dash of color to white silk, and bindings in contrasting color with large pearl buttons distinguish the linen models.

Taffeta silk in black, or dark colors, with colored stripes, was introduced early and remains popular for afternoon skirts. The skirt pictured is shirred at the waist and has a sash and bag of the silk.

Some Pretty Suits for Midsummer.

Nothing can supplant the suit, so it is the earliest arrival in the fashions of each new season and its story is a serial with a chapter added every little while. But we have arrived at the last installment for the summer of 1917 and rejoice in a happy ending. Wool jersey cloth queens it over its comrades, but nevertheless serge, taffeta, gabardine, tussah and some new weaves in silk make a strong finish.

There is no new departure in style to record in the new summer suits, but coats indulge in a few little vagaries in cut of the collar, adjustment of pockets and shaping of the skirt, merely by way of variety. The cape collar, similar to that shown in the picture has increased in size so that it falls over the top of the arm, but is trimmed into sloping revers at the front. There are attractive models of checked wool bound with braid, and belts and patch pockets remain much in evidence. But there are a few pokey coats and others with the widened hip effect. Serge suits are almost always very plain.

The summery suit pictured is of chiffon taffeta in an indistinct check. The coat is the usual length, but makes a new departure by its turned-back fronts, trimmed into lengthened points at the bottom. The skirt is set on a short yoke and has a slight drapery or fullness at the hips.

Light gray and oyster shell are shown among the smartest jersey and silk suits. A cool-looking model is of oyster white tussah bordered with a narrow band in black and white check. The checks are large, and a single line of them finishes the edges of the coat and the sleeves. They are not extended about the bottom of the coat, but cover the revers.

BUSINESS GOOD IN CANADA

No Financial Depression, and None Since the War Began.

A well-known correspondent of an important Western daily paper recently made an extended visit to Western Canada, and in summing up the results, after going thoroughly into conditions there, says there is no financial depression in Canada, nor has there been anything of the sort since the war began. Anyone who has watched the barometer of trade, and seen the bank clearings of the different cities grow and continue to grow will have arrived at the same conclusion. The trade statistics reveal a like situation. The progress that the farmers are making is highly satisfactory. As this correspondent says: "It is true there have been adaptations to meet new conditions, and taxes have been revised, and that a very large burden of added expenses many lines has been assumed, but it has been done methodically, carefully and with full regard for the resources to be called on. That this has been done fairly and wisely is proved by the present comfortable financial position."

"With the exception of a restricted area in the east, Canada is not an industrial country. The greater portion of the Dominion must be classed as agricultural area, with only an infinitesimal part of it fully developed. Lacking complete development, the agricultural portion of Canada has naturally placed its main dependence upon fewer resources than would be the case in the States. Even in peacetime, business would be subject to more frequent and wider fluctuations, due to the narrower foundation upon which it rests."

"Thus, Canada has been able to come up to the war with efficiency and sufficiency and to maintain and even advance its civilian activities."

"Canada's first element of financial strength lay in its branch bank system. This system has two great advantages: It makes the financial resources of the Dominion fluid so that supplies of capital can run quickly from the west to the east, and vice versa, also, it places at the command of each individual branch the combined resources of the whole institution so that there is an efficient safeguard against severe strain at any one point."

"Here in Winnipeg, the all-Canada banking houses maintain big, strong branches and, as elsewhere in the Dominion, these lend to an attitude of business and solidity that prevented even the start of any financial disturbance."

"That business generally is now coming strong on an even keel is largely due to the absolute refusal of the banks, both branch and independent, to exhibit the slightest signs of excitement or apprehensiveness."

"For all Canada the savings bank figures are astonishing. Beginning with 1913, they are, for the fiscal year ending March 31:

1913	822,928,968
1914	683,650,280
1915	683,731,452
1916	738,189,212
1917	889,705,668

"These figures represent what Canadians had put away after paying the increased living cost, which is about the same as in the States, all increases in taxes and imports of all kinds made necessary by the war and generous subscriptions to war bond issues."

"Prohibition has helped greatly in keeping the money supplies circulating in the normal, necessary channels. Tradesmen generally attribute a large part of the good financial condition to the fact that the booze bill has been eliminated. Canada takes law enforcement with true British seriousness."

"Financially, as in every other respect, Canada has developed an efficiency. She has done it in spite of initial conditions which would not look promising in the States and she has done it in a big, strong way."

"One of the best things we did," said one of the leading Winnipeg bankers to me, "was to decide early in the game that we simply would not borrow trouble."

"We worked in ignorance of how the war developed and without knowing exactly what our resources were, and had to find the way."

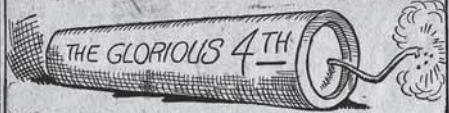

"And yet Canadians are not overburdened with taxes nor are they complaining on that score. For the common people there has been but a slight tax increase, if any, in a direct way. Indirect payments, of course, are made in the shape of higher prices for living commodities, but the price advance on such items is not heavier than in the States in the same period."—Advertisement.

Too Much Food Is Bad for Man — and So Is Too Little

WE can overindulge in almost anything, such as tea and coffee drinking, and even in the use of water. There is such a thing as Aquamania (water lunacy) and we also have food drunkards. Everyone knows that the intemperate use of alcoholic beverages is unquestionably injurious, just as every sane man knows that the temperate use of a mild Barley-Malt and Saazer Hop brew, such as BUDWEISER, is the drink of moderation. BUDWEISER sales exceed other beers by millions of bottles, because it is brewed in the good old honest way. Quality has for 60 years been the secret of its success.

Child's Death
Word was received here the latter part of the week of the death of Beatrice Hinton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hinton of Harvey, formerly of this place; at the home of her parents on June 18th after a short illness.

OBITUARY
Beatrice Phontilla Hinton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hinton of Harvey, Ill., formerly of this place, died at her home June 18, 1917, of a complication of diseases. She was born at Hoopeston, Illinois, January 21, 1911. She took sick two weeks before the close of the term of school and was unable to finish out the term, but was promoted from the first to the second grade. She had already completed the first grade and was ready for promotion before she took sick. She was a bright and loving little girl and was loved by all her school-mates and friends. She attended the M. E. Sunday school when sickness or inclement weather did not stand in the way. She leaves to mourn her loss: her father, her mother, two brothers, Howard and Elden, one sister, Marjorie, and a number of relatives and friends who will regret to hear of her early departure.

John Gay

Mr. John Gay one of the live wires of the church and a member of the board of trustees for a number of years has been a great help in bringing the church up to its present high state of efficiency. Mr. Gay can always be depended upon when real men are needed to help along the work.

Genuineness

There was never a more uncompromising foe of every species of religious unreality than Jesus Christ. He was a great hater of sham; he would not tolerate a religious pose. He blazed forth in righteous indignation against cant and hypocrisy. He came into violent collision with the party leaders of his day because he denounced counterfeit piety and insisted that religion was not a formal show or outward exhibition. Pharisaism run its religion life on watered stock. It is a case of religion on stilts. It is piety waiting to be photographed. It has all the stiffness and artificiality of posture that a man falls into when he sits before the camera. It is a piety that creaks because it is not oiled with the grace of humility. When religion becomes a form of self-advertisement it is in no mood to pray; for prayer is always a cry from the depths, it is the petition of a soul abashed in the presence of the Infinite. How inimitably you have depicted the hollowness of sham piety in the parable of the Pharisee and the publican. Robed in canonicals, he lifts his eyes toward heaven and with heart swelling with self sufficiency he thanks God he has no lapse of conduct to record and that he has walked upon the earth as a paragon of goodness. He drags his pompous egotism into the presence of the Most High and insults the Almighty with speech of self congratulation. Such self conscious devotion is always a mark of superficiality. Genuine prayer is never the child of surface living. If a man is satisfied with the mere semblance of goodness, if he makes no strenuous demands upon himself, he need not be surprised to find his prayer degenerate into a form of pious monologue and to lack the note of spiritual urgency. But let a man really delve beneath the surface of his own life, and compare his own comfortable and easy ideal for himself with the high standard of the Christ, and he will find the words of the publican to be the only kind of words that really fit his moral situation.

The damning thing about Pharisaism was the hypocrisy. It was more concerned about reputation than character. The one thing our Lord could not brook was disloyalty to the truth. He demanded genuineness at the core of a man's being. A lie is a fundamental sin. It is the father of moral chaos. It is the devil's ally. Nothing will wreck character like juggling with the truth. Duplicity means spiritual bankruptcy. The only kind of character that will stand the wear and tear of time is a character, that, like the seamless robe of Christ, is all of a piece. There is no surer way to make the moral and spiritual life unreal than to attempt to parcel it off into segments. Hypocrisy is a poison that spreads. It is a fearful thing when a man tries to inhabit several moral universes and when you are not quite sure which self will come to the door when you knock. Only God can measure the horrible mutilation of spirit that takes place in the life of the man who deals falsely with his deepest self and who plays fast and loose with the sanctities of character as if they were the merest tinsels. The only way to maintain one's moral self respect is to be absolutely genuine. The man who does that may not succeed as the world counts success, but he will gain what is infinitely more important: the witness of a good conscience in the sight of God. There will be no dark angels of remorse to haunt his dying hours. He can yield up his soul to his Maker without fear. He will be able to pass into the unseen world with something of the spirit of Sir Walter Scott, who when he lay dying, turned to his son-in-law and said: "Lockhart, be religious, be virtuous, nothing will comfort you but that when you lie here."

ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY OF COMMISSION

Appropriation Exceeds Previous Appropriation By Over $1,000,000.00.

The appropriations made by the Fiftieth General Assembly for road improvement are as follows:

Unexpended balance.....	$1,175,979.00
To meet Federal allotment.....	1,200,000.00
For State aid work.....	1,200,000.00
Total.....	$3,575,979.00
Amount appropriated and expended by Federal Government and the counties of Illinois.....	$4,609,979.00
Total available for expenditures for road improvement in Illinois during 1917 and 1918.....	7,200,958.00
Appropriation by Forty-ninth General Assembly for road improvement.....	000,000.00
State aid roads.....	2,000,000.00
Total.....	$5,600,958.00
Excess appropriations to improve 1918.....	1,024,979.00

It was not deemed wise to appropriate at this time any further sums for road improvement because of the high price of material and labor, as well as the scarcity of labor and the possible inability of contractors to obtain material owing to the shortage of cars in which to ship such material.

It is understood, however, that in the event conditions are such as to allow the expenditure of a reasonable proportion of the amount appropriated as above for State aid work by September 1918, that County Boards will then be advised to provide funds by levy to meet an additional allotment to be made available by the Fifty-first General Assembly on April 1, 1919, through an emergency appropriation of $1,000,000.00.

The entire amount appropriated for road improvement aggregating $3,699,679.00 will be paid out of the fund derived from motor license fees, which have been collected for that purpose only—hence these appropriations in no way add to the general taxes of the State.

NEW MOTOR LAW SIGNED

The New Motor Law provides for the following rates to take effect January 1, 1918 and January 1, 1920:

10 H. P. and less.....	1917	1918	1920
10 H. P. and more than 10.....	$ 3.00	$ 4.00	$ 6.00
15 H. P. and more than 15.....	4.00	6.00	9.00
20 H. P. and more than 20.....	6.00	9.00	15.00
25 H. P. and more than 25.....	8.00	15.00	25.00
More than 25 H. P.....	10.00	20.00	35.00
Motor bicycle.....	2.00	3.00	4.00
Electric vehicles to & inc. 2.....	5.00	10.00	15.00
Electric vehicles over 2 tons.....	10.00	20.00	35.00

This law further provides that the fund thus created known as the "road fund" can be used only for two purposes, viz:—first for the payment of the principal and interest of any bonded indebtedness incurred by the State of Illinois for road construction and second for the improvement of the highways of the State.

It will thus be seen that both purposes are primarily the improvement of our roads and that this money constitutes a special fund paid in and set aside for that specific purpose.

Patriotism and Production

It is of vital importance that every acre be planted and made fully productive this year.

Experts say that our nation's food supplies are short—that everyone must help grow banner crops or else citizens in many communities will suffer actual want.

The patriot can serve his country behind the plow as well as behind the canon.
